Welles Hose Ball Splendid Social Success Monday Night

Twenty-Seventh Annual Affair Draws 75 Couples—Held in Town Hall — Beautiful Decorations by Committee in Charge—Grand March Led By Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill—Favors for All.

The 27th annual Welles Hose dance is now history. The affair marked a pleasant closing to the season of Lent and was taken advantage of by 75 couples.

The affair was colorful from the beginning. The committee had spent a great deal of time in preparing the hall and those familiar with the hall were in unfamiliar surroundings for the entire walls and ceiling of the hall were covered with purple and gold streamers, ending in rosettes at the eye-level border of the hall. A large revolving drum in the center of the ceiling set with mirrors and upon which colored lights flickered, was a center of attraction.

Eddie Moore's orchestra, Ithaca, played for dancing. They were enclosed in a birch bark enclosure with sounding board trimmed with birds and musical notes. The stage was decorated in purple and gold with birch bark gate entrances.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill led the grand march during which men were given fire chief hats and the women were given boutonnieres. The hats were provided by the Texaco Company through N. B. Payne whose son-in-law, Frank Watkins, is in the sales department for the company in New York. The hose company committee appreciates Mr. Payne's efforts in securing these favors gratis.

Francis Hill was in charge of decorations, George Freeman in charge of lights, Walter Aldrich in charge of refreshments and Theodore Laffkas in charge of tickets and advertising. The cake donated by Pep-O bakery was awarded to George LaChance, Elkland.

APRIL FOOL'S DAY BEWARE!

Today is April Fool's day. The origin of this day is lost but it was formerly known as "All Fool's Day". One can imagine that there might have been a day when all the court fools or jesters in the days of old held a convention. Anyway, it is a day when one is advised to be wary or laughed at by those clever enough to put over a good joke.

Chalk Writers Must Stop Says Chief of Police Bovee

Adults are getting too handy with chalk in the opinion of Chief of Police Elmer Bovee. He blames adults for writing on walls of buildings owing to the height of the writing and by the character of the remarks. The writing, in white chalk, was found in the town hall last Monday and also on some of the Main street business blocks. This is a misdemeanor for destroying and defacing property and is a punishable offense. Chief Bovee asks that those using the chalk refrain from destroying other people's property.

Elmira Speaker Outlined Growth of Girl Scout Movement Tuesday

Annual Mother and Daughter Banquet Served Here—Miss Helen Mallory, District Commissioner, Speaks on History of Movement — Local Troop Celebrates Fifth Anniversary—Eastern Stars Serve

"Girl Scouting develops character, citizenship and home making abilities" Miss Helen Mallory, Elmira district commissioner, told attendants at the Mother and Daughter banquet held under Girl Scout auspices Tuesday night. The banquet was served in the Masonic Hall by the women of the Eastern Stars.

After the supper the program was opened by Mrs. Lynn Taylor, chairman of the local troop committee. She extended the greetings of the committeewomen to those present. She outlined some of the history of the local troop since its inception five years ago. She stated that 61 tenderfoot Scouts had been invested since the formation of the troop and 257 merit badges in Scouting had been awarded to Girl Scouts of Addison.

The banquet Tuesday night marked the fifth anniversary for the local troop and the silver or 25th anniversary for the National Girl Scout movement.

Mrs. Matthew Whitmore, also of the troop committee, reported for the camping committee of the local troop. She stated that heretofore the girls from Addison and vicinity who desired to go to camp had to go to Ithaca or to Rochester. It is the aim of local Scout leaders to get a nearby camp for the local girls. Committeemen are working toward this end but nothing definite is ready for report at the present time.

A quartet of Scouts presented two vocal numbers, one popular and a Scout song. Miss Mallory, formerly of this village, was introduced. She has been district commissioner for Elmira for the past 18 months.

She talked on "Twenty-five years in Scouting". The life and work of Juliette Low, organizer of the Girl Scout movement in the south. The movement was organized in 1912. In 1916 it becme a national movement throughout America and in 1919 became international in scope. There are 32 countries in Girl Scouting at the present time.

Since the formation of the Scouts there have been three uniforms, first the blue and then the khaki uniform. The present green uniform was adopted in 1920. The American Girl Scouts were hosts to the Girl Scouts of the world in 1926 and will again play hostesses to the international movement.

The Brownie movement for girls from 7 to 10 years was organized in 1926 and in 1934 the Mariner program was organized for the older girls. Since the creation of the organization there have been over 2,000,000 girls in Scouting and there are 400,000 at the present time.

Miss Mallory developed the idea that Scouts learn character, citizenship and home crafts in their work. Another reason for the success of the movement in her estimation was the insistance on trained leaders. In addition to aiding the girls the women in the movement are aided for they develop leadership, develop their own abilities and interests.

The speaker closed her remarks by stating a community could not rise above the morals of its women and the Scouts kept this standard high.

There were 106 at the banquet. Taps closed the program.

Peace Sponsors Seeking Radio Program Listeners

The Emergency Peace Campaign was started in Philadelphia, as a one man crusade against United States entry in war several months ago and has now developed into a national movement. Its objective at present is: "No foreign wars for the United States". Communications have been received locally asking support for the program by listening to a series of radio talks, getting friends and neighbors to listen to them and to petition legislative representatives to vote against war measures.

Tuesday, April 6 at 10:30 P. M. three speakers will institute the program over the National Broadcasting Company. These speakers will be Admiral Richard Byrd, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Educator Takes Post-Life Work with Great Teacher

Ithaca— Leland N. Freeman, 46, high school science teacher, died last week. He left a letter in which he stated, "I am leaving you for an indefinite period to take a post-life course with the greatest Teacher of all". He was a graduate of St. Lawrence University, Canton, and served in the schools of Canton, Northport (L. I.), Gowanda, Elmira Heights, Moravia and Ithaca.

Baptist Chimes Subject For Many Letters

The Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, pastor of the Baptist Church, is still receiving communications relative to his playing of the brake drum chimes of the church over the NBC national hookup March 21. Letters have been received from Florida, San Diego, New Jersey, Tonawanda, Montana and two from Missouri in addition to several others from New York State. The San Diego letter promises funds when the writer learns the correct address of the pastor and ten cents was inclosed in a letter from a "gold miner" Missouri, who promises more when his mine "comes through".

The chimes were played in conjunction with the organ here Sunday morning as part of the services and were then taken to the First Baptist Church in Corning where they were used in part of the Easter Sunday night services. The Rev. Arnold accompanied the bells to Corning. Charles Champlain played the concert here.

MEETING POSTPONED

The meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Chapel of the Redeemer scheduled for April 1 has been postponed until April 8. The place and hostess for the coming meeting will be announced later.

Boy Scouts Come to Front at Times of National Calamity

No matter what the circumstances, youth always takes keen interest in what ever befalls. This of course has always held true. The sound of the fire siren, the blare of bugle, the factory whistle or any other form of calamity alarm has always registered the keenest interest in the minds of the young boy.

In years gone by this tendency of youngsters to be the first to answer the alarm was an aggravation and often a downright nuisance to trained workmen answering the call to duty.

How the picture has changed in modern times. Rarely a major catastrophy but the news reports contain stories of heroism and fortitude rendered in orderly manner by this same age group of boys.

The Boy Scouts are trained from Tenderfoot to Eagle Scout to meet just such emergencies, keep their heads, and work efficiently.

The news last week carried the story of the terrible calamity that befell the school at New London, Texas, and news writers were alert to note the quick and orderly service rendered by the Scouts at New London.

Army officers fould it difficult to mobilize the much needed soldiers so the radio sent out a call for First Class Scouts. With unloaded rifles these youthful workers patrolled regular beats with the regular soldiers and held back the curious crowds. Many individual acts of sacrifice and timely aid were rendered by the well trained Scouts during these first few tragic hours at New London.

The Boy Scout does these things, not for praise or commendation, but to Scouting, as a method of training youth, goes the credit for changing what was once a pernicious habit of youth (to be always "in the way" whenever disaster or calamity befell) to capatalize this natural effervescent activity of youth into a nationally recognized and orderly movement ready at any instant to promote or defend the public welfare.

A NEW WAR

Lately a war was declared. An army is now being raised which is starting into the field. One of the minor objectives of the army itself, will be the raising of a fund of money, at least two million dollars, to be used for prosecuting the war. Most of the soldiers who will fight in this war are women, and as befits the army the cause is a holy crusade against one of the greatest enemies of the human race. It is a war against cancer.

The army has 2,000,000 members and it is already operating in 39 states. It is being led by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, who has said: "There is no longer need to fight cancer alone. Hundreds of thousands will share the burden, understand the sufferings which too long have seared the very souls of men and women. Doctors will have a better chance of seeing early cancer while it is curable."

The army of women who will work under Dr. Little is the largest evangelistic movement ever loosed against any disease. They will raise a campaign fund to finance a great publicity drive for educating all who can read about the wisdom of early treatment of cancer. They will hammer home the fact that cancer in its early stages is curable, and endeavor to break down this age-old superstition which causes so many people to consider the disease a disgrace to be kept secret.

The human race has been afflicted by cancer no one knows how long. Some of the same treatment is used by the medical profession which was urged by the Egyptians some 5,000 years ago. This is an ancient war now to be resumed, and the public will hope the larger army engaged will reduce the number of fatilities from this dread disease.

RULE OR RUIN

News sifting in from Washington indicates that the President is turning on the heat to force Congress to adopt his scheme of packing the Supreme Court. This Senator and that have been told by Roosevelt or Farley that unless they vote right, their patronage pie will be cut off between the crust and the tin. Federal workers going out into agricultural sections of the country are said to be pleading the cause of the President's idea to "reform" the court. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt having found himself riding an unpopular horse for the first time in a long period is determined to prove his strength in the country. One is minded of that speech he made just before election regarding his intention to show himself to be "the master" in his next term.

Criticism of the President's plan to pack the court comes more vehemently from Democrats than from Republicans. The fact it is a constitutional issue and far removed from the realm of party politics is shown by the utterances of old Democratic organs coming out strongly against his proposal. There are many Democratic papers condemning this court plan, but perhaps none state the case any more clearly than does the New York Times in the following excerpt from one of its editorials:

His advocacy of his present proposal puts him in a strange position. It requires him to propose a method of approach not mentioned in the Democratic platform. It requires him to insert, post facto, parenthetical clause in that platform, in order to justify his present action. It requires him to summon the Democratic party to forget its traditional loyalty to States' rights and to waive its traditional opposition to a vast centralization of authority. It requires him to ask the American people to "trust Congress", in case his present plan is adopted and the Supreme Court becomes an institution which "will not undertake to override the judgment of Congress" in interpreting the Constitution. But he himself gave an impressive warning, only a year ago, of what might be the consequence of a sudden shift of authority in Congress. He said then that his Administration has built up new instruments of power which were wholesome and proper in his own hands: "But in the hands of political puppets of an economic autocracy such power would provide shackles for the liberties of the people."

We come again to the question of what emergency requires the President to act in haste; why it is necessary for his Administration to obtain new powers in addition to the abundant powers it already has, without referring this proposal to the people.

The President did not repeat, in his address on Tuesday evening, his suggestion that the Supreme Court is blocking effective flood control and the prevention of erosion in the dust bowl. He did not ask for additional powers in order to enable the Government to overcome depression and to achieve recovery. Instead, he spoke of recovery as definitely here, and actually proceeding at such a pace that unless his Administration has power to act, and does act in time, there may be a recurrence of the catastrophe of 1929.

Unquestionably the inflationary possibilities inherent in a sudden expansion of bank deposits by some fifteen billion dollars during the past four years has created a major problem. It is a problem which the Federal Reserve Board has already taken steps to solve. It is a problem which will require the exercise of other powers by the Government—powers the legality of which has not been questioned by the Supreme Court. But it is not a problem whose solution is likely to be aided by the re-establishment of NRA and AAA. For the very essence of the problem is how to maintain a large and expanding volume of production which will keep rices from rising rapidly despite the inflation of purchasing power that has taken place. And the worst possible way in which to attempt to solve that problem would be to restore the monopolistic controls and the artificial limitations of production inherent in the philosophies of AAA and NRA.

THE CHOICE

A poll of all the newspapers in the country outside the Metropolis, shows that three out of four are strongly opposed to the President's plan for packing the Supreme Court. Letters received by Congressmen relative to the proposed change show the folks back home are even more strongly set against adding six justices to the Court. Legislators are supposed to shape their actions in accordance with the will of the people of their districts. If they vote the President's demand for a remade Court, they will have chosen between Democratic government and dictatorial government, as exemplified by the Roosevelt demand for supreme power over the other two branches of our constituted authority. Senators and Congressmen should have the gravity of this choice brought home to them by the people of their districts.

TAX LIMITATION

Tax-paying residents of all rural communities such as this should heartily support a bill by Assemblyman Herbert Rapp of Genesee County. The Rapp Bill calls for a popular vote on a constitutional amendment to reduce the present constitutional real estate tax limits and make them state-wide. The same bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator George Rogers of Rochester.

As the state Constitution now stands the two per cent tax limit on assessed value of real estate applies only in counties which have a city with a population of at least 100,000. The Rogers-Rapp amendment would reduce the limit to 1¾ per cent and make it apply to all local governmental agencies. It is believed passage of this proposed constitutional amendment would prevent overloading the poor taxpayer with a lot of costs which can be avoided.

Everyone in Steuben County should get squarely behind this Rogers-Rapp Bill. Judge George Pratt of this county who is chairman of the Tax Limitation Committee, has been conducting a vigorous fight for many months in support of the movement for more just tax rates in this and other counties not now protected by a limit. Judge Pratt has given freely of his time filling speaking engagements in many parts of the state to further this movement, and other public spirited citizens should enlist in the fight which can be won when sufficient pressure is brought upon the Legislature.

Only a few counties in the state now have tax limitation enforced. It is ridiculous to assume that only those property owners who live in a county containing a city of 100,000 population, should be protected by tax limitation. As a matter of fact owners of farms and homes in villages of the state are, generally speaking, less able to pay a high tax rate upon their real estate than owners of large city property. It is a notorious fact that farmers of Steuben County have for years been bowed down by the heavy load of real estate taxes levied on their farms—taxes which they cannot possibly escape and keep their land. The Rogers-Rapp amendment would set the tax limit for all governmental agencies at a point where property owners in rural communities could begin to see daylight in their tax bills.

This bill should be passed so the people may vote their approval.

SIGNS OF INFLATION

While stocks, in their general trend, have been going up, bonds have been going down since they reached their all-time high last December. There are various minor reasons for this, but one overshadowing major reason: Fear of inflation.

Most of the business commentators have been discussing and anticipating credit inflation for some time. A short time ago the President in a Fireside Chat pointed to the danger of it appearing in the near future. Security exchange officials have been and are frankly worried by the almost feverish activity in the stock market.

It is known that the Government is studying possible steps designed to prevent or retard inflation. Meanwhile bonds being the same as mortgages on the property of the company issuing them, are depressed by signs of inflation.

Will Court Be Flouted Again? This Is Seen as Chrysler Issue

By MARK SULLIVAN

IN WHAT now occurs about the Chrysler strike in Detroit, the thing more important to watch than any other is what happens to the courts. Conceding the very great interest attaching to other aspects, it is the effect on the courts that will have deepest bearing on the kind of country America is to be.

That all courts, the judicial system as an institution, are under attack, everybody knows. In the preservation of this system the people have at stake the heritage of seven centuries. Yet few realize how tragic would be their loss if they lost this.

Preservation of the authority of law administered by courts is, to the public, the fundamental issue in the Chrysler strike. Yet there is danger it may be lost sight of in the more dramatic interest attaching to other aspects.

Let us look at the relation of the courts to the Chrysler strike: Some 6,000 men "sat down" in the Chrysler factories, barred out the company officials who represent the owners, and provided themselves with the means to use force in resisting eviction. The owner of the factories, the Chrysler Corporation, went to the court and asked for an order directing the sit-downers to cease their illegal occupancy by a given hour. The hour passed. The sit-downers did not quit. As this is written they are there yet.

At present the head of the Chrysler Corporation, Mr. Chrysler, and the head of the sit-downers' union, Mr. Lewis, are in conference. In this conference Mr. Lewis has his purposes, Mr. Chrysler has his. There is no one present, unless it be Governor Murphy, to stand for the interest of the court that has been flouted, and the people whose paramount interest is the preservation of respect for the authority of courts. The purpose of Mr. Chrysler is to end the strike on his terms. The purpose of Mr. Lewis is to end it on his terms. In that common purpose both are likely to treat the court, as democratic institutions everywhere in the world are being treated, with an indifference that amounts to contemptuous flouting.

The relation of the courts to sit-down strikes can be more clearly seen by turning away from the Chrysler strike to a different strike in which the events are now over. In the sit-down at Flint in January and February the owner of the property, General Motors, got from the court an order directing the sit-down strikers to leave the plant. When the court's officer, the Sheriff, read this to the sit-downers they "booed." Thereupon General Motors called the attention of the court to the fact that its order was being ignored. The court then issued a "writ of attachment" directing the Sheriff to arrest and remove the sit-downers. The Sheriff asked the Governor of the state, Mr. Murphy, for the assistance he had to have to carry out the court's order. To this request Governor Murphy made no reply. Instead, he conducted conferences between the heads of General Motors and the heads of the sit-downers' union. These conferences ended in agreement.

In the agreement General Motors blandly recited that it would ask the court to drop the proceedings which General Motors had initiated. General Motors added that it would make this request dependent upon "the will of the court." In effect, General Motors, having come to an agreement with the sit-downers' union, promised it would ask the court to do whatever is the legal verbiage for "just forget it."

In accordance with this promise General Motors lawyers asked the court to dismiss its action against the sit-downers But General Motors lawyers appear to have got from the judge a reception which they could hardly have anticipated. Judge Gadola told them what amounted to saying that they couldn't use him as a mere strike-breaking agency. He told them that they couldn't get a writ from him, use that writ to bring about agreement with the sit-downers and then ask him to "just forget it."

Judge Gadola told General Motors lawyers that they were themselves perilously close to contempt, that they "might find themselves liable for contempt citations." He said that such flouting of the court and the law as had been practiced by the leaders of the sit-downers could not be allowed to pass without penalty—the spectacle was subversive of the authority of law.

"Already," Judge Gadola said, "we are beginning to see the results of their contemptuous action. People who are being served with papers in less important lawsuits are laughing at the court officers and pointing out that the court was impotent to enforce its will upon the strikers and to punish them for non-obedience."

Judge Gadola said that "the court system cannot be treated as these men have treated it in the last few weeks." He said that he had no desire to send any one to jail" but he declared that the strike leaders must appear before him, "acknowledge the jurisdiction of the court and apologize for their contemptuous actions."

This declaration Judge Gadola made on February 17 What has happened since, if anything, has not appeared in the newspapers, so far as I have seen. (It is from newspaper accounts that I take the facts and quotations cited here.) It looks as though this obscure judge of a local court in a small Michigan city is making himself worthy to stand with the great judges in American and British tradition who have made the centuries-long struggle for the supremacy of law. Judge Gadola is defending the judicial system against both the sit-downers and the corporation.

Divided Court and Reasonable Doubt

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Recently Senator Norris made a speech which, I believe, opens up the fundamental constitutional question on which the American people must make up their minds. Citing Chief Justice Marshall that "in no doubtful case" would "the court pronounce a legislative act to be contrary to the Constitution," Mr. Norris pointed out that the court has frequently invalidated an act of Congress with as many as four justices dissenting. "Surely," he said, "if four judges think the act is constitutional, it is a doubtful case, and Congress should be given the benefit of the doubt."

I should agree that where the court is divided it is obvious that the Constitution does not speak plainly, and that reasonable men of equal learning in the law can interpret the Constitution differently. Chief Justice Marshall hoped they would not disagree sharply on fundamental issues, and we may all wish that the court had been able to follow his advice. But the fact is that often the justices do disagree with the utmost conviction that their brethren are wrong.

The question I should like to raise is whether Senator Norris is right in concluding that in such doubtful cases the doubt should always and automatically be resolved in favor of Congress. For my notion is that in great and doubtful cases where the Constitution is not clear, the doubt should be cleared up not by a majority of Congress but by the people themselves through a clarifying decision.

Let us note in the first place that Senator Norris has not proposed that acts of the state legislatures should also be given the benefit of the doubt when more than two justices dissent. Why not? Because he must see that this could create intolerable disorder. Let us suppose that a state enacted by indirection what amounted to a tariff against products from other states, and that three justices, believers in states' rights, said the law was constitutional. Then, though two-thirds of the Supreme Court held the statute unconstitutional, and therefore no law at all, the state would seek to enforce it. What respect would the dairy farmers of Wisconsin have for a New York law excluding their milk when six out of nine members of the court had declared that law unconstitutional? Is it not clear that if Senator Norris's rule were applied to state laws the interpretation of the Constitution would be determined by a minority of the court?

No one, I think, has proposed to give the states the benefit of the doubt when the court is divided. Ought Congress, then, to have the benefit of the doubt in the sense that any act of Congress shall automatically be constitutional if a minority of three justices think it is constitutional? Let us suppose, now, that Congress passes a law which fixes a uniform minimum wage throughout the United States, identical in Georgia and in Massachusetts. Six justices say it is unconstitutional. Three say it is constitutional. So the President has to enforce the law in Georgia. Would Mr. Norris like the job of enforcing a law in Georgia that the people of Georgia disapproved and after six justices of the Supreme Court had declared the law unconstitutional?

Senator Norris is in effect proposing that a majority of the court may nullify the laws of a state but that they may not nullify the laws of Congress. Thus, wherever the Constitution does not speak plainly, all reasonable doubts are to be resolved in favor of the existing Congressional majority.

This is a curious way of interpreting "reasonable doubt," that where there is doubt one organ of government shall undoubtedly prevail, that it shall prevail over the states and over individuals though six justices think it has no lawful right to prevail.

I should suppose that if six justices hold an act unconstitutional, then it is at least reasonable to say that the law may be unconstitutional. But Senator Norris's rule is that if only six justices object, then there ought to be no doubt that the law is constitutional. The essence of his proposal, therefore, is that the benefit of all constitutional doubts should always be given to the Administration in power and its majority in Congress.

Those who take this view honestly believe, of course, that the President and Congress represent more truly the will of the people than do the six obstructing justices appointed for life. But what they have forgotten, it seems to me, is that the President is elected for four years and that only one-third of the Senate can be changed every two years. Unlike the British or the French, our system of government is not quickly responsive to the will of the people. The President stays on for four years even when he has lost the support of a majority of the people; most of the Senate stays on though the people have changed their minds. That is one of the essential reasons why the American form of government calls for a limitation of the powers of Congress and the President.

If the national legislature is to be given a free hand, substantially like that which the British Parliament possesses, then those who advocate this must go the rest of the way and provide that the President and Congress shall resign and call a new election when they have lost the confidence of the country. They cannot have it both ways. Elected officials cannot have long fixed terms and no constitutional check upon their authority.

The British people can afford to give Parliament a free hand, unrestrained by judicial review, because they can at any time compel Parliament to consult the people. But no one could compel Mr. Hoover to submit himself to the people in 1930. No one can now compel Mr. Roosevelt to go back to the people at any time in the next four years. Until 1942 no one can compel the whole Senate to go back to the people.

Lacking this power, the American people cling to judicial review, though it is awkward and occasionally abused, because it is a way by which an Administration, irrevocably fixed in office for a definite number of years, can be compelled to go back to the people when its authority is in reasonable doubt. That is why judicial review is essential to democracy under the American form of government.

My own view is that the defect of the Constitution is that the process of amendment, which is the American way of consulting the people on basic issues, is too rigid, too complicated and too slow. I should like to see it simplified and expedited by a provision that when a divided court has shown that there is reasonable doubt as to what the Constitution means, the act shall be valid if two-thirds of Congress re-enact it and if the voters by a special referendum ratify the act.

There are many details which would have to be carefully considered. But the main principle seems to me fairly certain. It is in effect a modified combination of what Senator Norris and Senator Wheeler have proposed. It says that reasonable doubts about the meaning of the Constitution shall be resolved by the people who alone have the ultimate power in all constitutional issues.

Time For Teamwork

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As every sports-follower knows, no athletic team, however brilliant its individual stars, can hope to win consistently until its members learn to co-ordinate their efforts.

This is known as teamwork.

It is a primary requisite to success in every human activity.

It seems particularly necessary in our national affairs today.

America during the past few years has been fighting a stiff battle against depression. The palm of victory—Recovery—is in sight. Yet it can be lost if lack of co-operation — of teamwork — among the various agencies involved, persists.

Extravagance in government, which handicaps the workers on whose earnings the nation depends; overloading of public payrolls, at the expense of all citizens; differences between employers and employes, interfering seriously with needed production; disrespect for the laws under which we operate—all these are the antithesis of the teamwork we need.

In peace, teamwork—the quality of striving together for a common aim—has built great nations. In war, it has won more battles than cold courage or shrewd strategy. As the simple verse of one soldier-poet has pointed out:

"It ain't the individual, nor the army as a whole,
But the everlastin' teamwork of every bloomin' soul."

And it is this same co-operation that can bring us victory in our current striving for a sound and complete recovery.

Without it, success remains gravely in doubt.

Walton Reporter Tells of Centralization Problems There

The following article regarding school centralization was taken from the Walton Reporter of a recent date. Walton is a village with a similar location in the Catskills to that of Addison in the foothills of the Alleganies. As the centralization problems of Walton are similar to those of this community it is believed the study made there will be of interest to local people, who desire the best possible school facilities for their children. (Editor's note.)

Centralization of schools in and near Walton was recommended recently in a report submitted by a committee which had spent several months in consideration of the school problem and the probable effects of centralization.

The committee which is composed of George F. White, Everett Doig, Louis Camp, F. Rae Gosper and Rev. F. C. Davidson, adopted the report unanimously. They point out that school centralization will bring increased educational advantages and that after the first year of centralization the tax rate should be no more than the average tax now being paid in the rural districts. Under centralization the tax rate in the village af Walton would be about three mills higher than the tax outside the village as district No. 1 must pay the principal and interest on any indebtedness outstanding at the time of centralization.

The report is as follows:

The committee has had a number of meetings in which various aspects of school centralization have been discussed. It is our opinion that the advantages of centralization far outweigh the disadvantages and we unhesitatingly recommend that a movement be started toward effecting a centralized district.

In this report the committee will endeavor to point out both the advantages and disadvantages of centralization as we have discussed them in our meetings.

Educational Facilities

At the present time the Walton village school has ample facilities to care for the needs of its grade pupils in the village and the academic scholars both in the village and those who come in from the rural school districts. This instructional service probably compares very favorably with any school of its size. There are departments for training pupils in homemaking, agriculture and business in addition to the regular academic and college entrance courses.

If funds were available several new departments which would be of value to the young people who attend school could be added. At the present time a boy who does not wish to fit himself for life on the farm or who does not plan to pursue a higher education has the choice of taking an academic course or entering the commercial department. This means that every year the school is graduating a group of young people who go out and look for jobs with no specialized training in any trade. If funds were available a manual training course in the school would be of great value. In a course of this kind the fundamentals of automobile mechanics, carpentry, masonry and electrical work would be offered and the graduates would find it much easier to obtain positions in this and other communities.

In the larger schools pupils have the advantage of full-time, specialized instruction. In the rural school one teacher presides over eight grades and she can allot but a small portion of her time to the work of any one grade. It is our opinion that the boys and girls who enter high school direct from the rural schools are at a disadvantage in competing with the children who have completed the prescribed course in the village graded schools. Under a centralized school system it is mandatory for pupils of the seventh and eighth grades to attend the graded school provided by the centralized district and transportation must be provided for these pupils by the district.

We have considered the problem of the lower six grades. Although we are of the opinion that children in these grades would have better educational facilities in a larger school, we feel that in the event of centralization it will be better to maintain the rural schools on a six-grade basis until the problems of transportation are thoroughly worked out, and facilities provided for rest, play and food for these younger children with supervision at all times provided. We have found that the transportation and care of young children is being accomplished in most centralized districts with satisfaction to both parents and teachers but we believe that this is a matter which should be given most careful consideration and that no changes be made until it is a certainty that the children to be transported will be benefited not only educationally but also physically.

In this connection we wish to point out that in a centralized school system no rural school can be closed until such time as the school voters in that district by majority vote request the trustees of the centralized district to provide transportation for the children who attend that school. Each district in the centralized system decides for itself whether it wishes to maintain its rural school up to and including the sixth grade.

Transportation

The committee has given little time to the matter of transportation, believing that in the event of centralization transportation is a matter which will have to be worked out by the central school board of trustees and the district superintendent of schools.

We do point out, however, that if a central school system is set up in the Walton district that transportation of pupils to and from the central school will present many difficulties. At the present time Walton has a large mileage of unimproved roads and at times in the winter and spring these roads are virtually impassable.

In a previous paragraph we have advised against closing any rural school until the problem of transportation is thoroughly worked out and experience has shown that a school bus can make regular trips. It is our opinion that transportation can be provided even in the most difficult districts to get to, for children of seventh grade age but no child in the lower grades should be taken to a central school unless it is found possible to provide bus service within a short walk of the child's home.

Financial

The committee has made a study of the present financial setup of all schools in the town of Walton and the amount of state aid to which a central district would be entitled. We find that a centralized district would receive from the state the same amount of money which the different schools now in the district receive plus an equalization quota on the entire central district of nearly an equal amount. In addition the centralized district would receive one-half the cost of transportation of pupils and if a new building were required one-quarter of the cost of the building and one-quarter of the interest of any bond issue. At the present time the village and rural schools in the town of Walton are receiving about $84,000 in state aid. Centralization would increase this to $160,000, exclusive of any money received for transportation or for a new building.

The total cost of running all schools in the town of Walton for the year 1935-36 was approximately $126,000. Of this amount $41.745 were raised by tax and the remainder, some $84,000, was received in the form of state aid. Under centralization the centralized school would receive $161,000 as state aid. The education law requires that a centralized district raise a 5-mill tax on the full valuation of the district to obtain its full quota of state aid. A five-mill tax in the town of Walton would yield $28,342, which would make the minimum amount available for central school purposes in the town $189,000 or $63,000 more than was used by all school districts in the town during the school year 1935-36.

In the event of centralization increased state aid would not be received until the second year of centralization. In order to operate as a central school there would be some extra expense and it is probable that during the first year there would be some increase in the present tax rates, especially in the rural districts which now have rates of four and one-half mills. This has been an experience in most central schools. We recommend that if centralization is effected that the schools in the centralized district operate under the present set-up as far as possible for at least one year in order to keep the first year's tax as low as possible.

The tax rate in the rural districts run from a low of four mills on the assessed valuation to a high of ten mills. In the village of Walton the tax rate is ten mills. After the first year of centralization it should be possible to operate a centralized school district with a tax of five to six mills, except in those districts which have bonded indebtedness. The law specifies that any district which goes into a centralization and which has outstanding debts is solely responsible for those debts and that they cannot be passed on to the central district. There are two districts in the town which have bonded indebtedness, the Northfield district and the Union Free School District No. 1 of Walton village. These two districts would have a higher tax than the other districts in the centralization until all bonds outstanding are paid off. The tax rate in Walton village district would average about three mills more than the base rate of the central district.

This committee after a thorough study of the problem believes that a centralized school would give the young people of the town of Walton and vicinity increased educational facilities which can be obtained in no other way; that the average cost to the taxpayers will be no larger than at present. It therefore recommends that the Department of Education be petitioned to lay out a central school district in the town of Walton and vicinity.

CCC Activities

This is the last time this column will be written by the present writer. The time has come for me to take up duties in another camp. The camp located just out of Camden, N. Y., to be exact.

On arriving in Addison we lived in tents until our permanent camp was built. Much water has gone under the bridge since then. The camp developed rapidly, but much still remains to be done.

In taking leave of the camp and Addison my best wishes go out to all it has been my pleasure to associate with. My stay here has been a most enjoyable one. Good luck. And particularly to the fellows in camp, "carry on."

W. L. Rose

This Sunday will be the fourth anniversary celebration of the CCC's. The local camp is busy making arrangements to take care of the visitors expected on that day. The visiting hours are from 11 A. M. to 6 P. M. Visitors will be met at the entrance and shown around the camp between those hours.

Some fifty-nine of the fellows enlistment period is up. When this is in print they will be on their way home.

Such a drop in Company strength will effect the educational program no end. However, things will go on as before.

The two major prizes for which young people will contest in the national meeting will be a trip to Europe and the Holy Land for first prize, and a trip to Mexico for second prize.

Mr. Platt took for the subject of his theme the title, "Send Out the Light." Miss Babcock spoke on the theme, "Missions Tomorrow." Rules of the contest provided that contestants write their own themes Both themes given at Painted Post were excellent in subject matter and composition.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of information of the New York State college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Removing PPrinting

Mrs. D. S. B., asks: "What is the easiest and most effective way to remove the printing on flour sacks and sugar bags, when making them into towels?"

The answer: "The ease with which printing may be removed from sacks depends on the kind of material used in printing", according to Cornell bulletin E-356 on spot and stain removal. "Paint, dye and ink are frequpently used, and of these printer's ink is the most difficult to remove.

"Rinse the sacks first in cold water, then rub any good laundry soap on the printing. Soak the sacks overnight in kerosene, and in the morning wash them in heavy suds.

"If the printing still remains, boil the sacks in a lye solution made by dissolving one teaspoonful of lye in one gallon of water and straining the solution. add the lye solution to plenty of water for boiling. Then rinse the sacks in vinegar water, using two tablespoons of vinegar to one gallon of water to neutralize the effect of the lye. Rinse the sacks three times in cold water."

The bulletin also suggests a method that will sometimes remove printer's ink.

Patching Concrete

N. R., writes: "The concrete foundation wall under my barn is badly cracked and has settled in places. Can I patch it now? How can it be kept from freezing?"

Professor B. B. Robb of the agricultural engineering department answers: "To patch the cracked wall, chip out the edges of the cracks with a hammer and pointed chisel so as to remove all loose material and to make room to crowd in new concrete.

"Wet the old concrete well, then fill the cracks with concrete made of one part cement and two parts of sand. The addition of about half as much lime as cement will make it stick better.

"To keep it from freezing, use a quick-setting cement and add common salt and calcium chloride to the mixing water.

"I would not recommend, however, that concrete work be done on the farm during freezing weather, if it is possible to do it at another time. More failures result than good jobs. Contractors, it is true, set concrete in winter, but they are equipped to prevent it freezing."

Headlines invented in 1622

The first known headlines to be used in a newspaper appeared in 1622.

CAUTIONS CATTLE OWNERS

Vaccination against Bang's disease or infectious abortion "is still in the experimental stage and livestock owners should hesitate to place faith in claims that promise more than scientific findings to date warrant", according to Dr. J. R. Mohler of the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The bureau is now conducting field experiments in about 250 herds, 25 of which are in New York state. Experiments are also underway at the New York State Veterinary College at Ithaca to determine the value of calfhood vaccination against this disease.

HOUSE FLOWERS

A flower show built around a "House of Flowers" and applying directly to the typical small home in the town or city is offered by the department of floriculture and ornamental horticulture at Cornell on May 1 and 2. The show is sponsored by students and staff members.

Part of the display is devoted to a wild flower garden with naturalistic plantings to show how native trees, shrubs and flowering plants can be used on the home grounds.

A second exhibit is planned for the small property and features a variety of perennials both suitable and hardy for central New York. One group includes perennials that grow best in full sunlight, and another consists of plants that tolerate the shade. Border plantings, and suggestions for pools and terraces receive attention.

BORDEN

The chicken supper which was held Thursday evening at the parish house was well attended. About $25 was cleared.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Spraying Fruit Trees

Dr. R. W. Leiby

The annual late winter bath for all fruit trees is about due, and orchardists, both commercial and those with home orchards, should warm up spray machine motors and get all spray equipment and materials ready for the early sprays.

The late winter spraying of twigs limbs and tree trunks is the first of a series of about a half-dozen treatments applied by fruit growers during the year to cambat insects and disease that annually threaten the fruit crop.

Either a lime-sulfur spray with nicotine sulfate, or a lubricating oil emulsion with nicotine sulfate may be used. The oil emulsion spray whether commercial or home-made is safest applied before the buds burst. It will control scale insects, mites, bud moth and some aphids. The lime-sulfate sprays, diluted one part of the concentrate to eight parts of water with a pint of nicotine sulfate to each 100 gallons of the diluted spray, will control aphids better when applied as a delayed dormant spray and also clean up scale infestations.

Commercial apple growers should depend on the timely spray service recommendations supplied by county agricultural agents in cooperation with the insect and plant disease investigators of the College of Agriculture. Two Cornell bulletins, available free, are also helpful. The first, E-314, applies to the Hudson Valley, and the second, E-313, applies to Western New York.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

SEXED CHICKS

Sexed chicks are a great help to the person who wishes to raise either males or females but does not have the space to keep extra chicks of the sex not wanted. Many hatcheries now furnish sexed chicks. Experts are now able to determine the sex of the day-old chick so accurately that the hatcheries are able to guarantee 90 percent.

The advantage to the person who wants about 60 pullets in the fall and cannot care for more than 100 chicks is obvious. By purchasing 100 sexed pullets of the particular breed he desires he starts with approximately 90 pullets—oftern more If he loses 10 percent of the birds before maturity he will have on hand roughly 80 or more pullets. Out of this number he should be able to pick the 60 best birds for his layers.

In such a case the mortality would be a great deal higher if 200 mixed pullet and cockerel chicks were raised in the same space with the equipment capable of caring for 100. The pullets resulting from crowding would not have the proper conditions for growth and naturally would be of poorer quality.

The cost of day-old pullets is higher than for chicks which are not sexed. Picking a hatchery price list at random we find the price of 100 high grade White Leeghorn day-old chicks $12.90. The cost of 100 of the same grade and breed of day old pullets on the same list $26.80. Another hatchery offers White Leghorn chicks at $8.95 per hundred and sexed pullets at $17.90.

Sexed chicks are attractive to the broiler raiser. The young cockerels put on weight faster than the pullets. For broiler raising there is usually a slight saving in buying all cockerls. For instance in the first list quoted above we find day-old cockerels selling for $12.40 per hundred as against $12.90 for unsexed chicks.

Sexing does not injure the chick if expertly done. The egg laying ability is not impaired because if the chick is injured in the examination it is not likely to live to a laying age. Reliable hatcheries have the examination done by experienced workers so that there is little or no chick mortality as a result.

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

FATE plays many a fancy prank in the lives of our sports celebrities, but few pranks so fancy as that played on a Central New York lad who is now in the top flight of baseball.

I'm talking about Georgie Selkirk, the twinkle-toed kid of the New York Yankees. Though an outfielder now, George started his baseball life as a catcher. But, to make a long story longer—

Selkirk's career began when he played backstop for the Rochester Technical High School where he was preparing for a lifetime of electrical engineering.

One day, after a high school game in 1926, the business manager of the Rochester club approached George, gave him a contract and told him to report to a baseball farm in Crisfield, Maryland.

George hastily grabbed the next train to the little town of Crisfield. Arriving shortly before the start of a local game, he sought out the ball park and entered the dressing room.

"Hey, you," bellowed the manager, "What are you doing with those things? You're an outfielder."

"Well, I have been catching," said George.

"You're an outfielder to me," bawled the manager. "I asked them to send me an outfielder and that's what you're going to be."

And George was. He played center field that afternoon with a catcher's glove on his hand. And, what's more, he proved to be the star of the occasion.

Immediately after the game, the managers of the Crisfield team and of the other local outfit, the Cambridge Club, got together to chew the fat.

"Hey," said the Crisfield chief, "Where'd you get that guy Selkirk who won the game for you this afternoon?"

"Rochester sent him down," said the Cambridge manager. "I told them to send me a fielder but they sent me a catcher. He did all right though."

The Crisfield manager blew up. "Rochester sent you a catcher! Why that guy was supposed to play with us. Look here!"

And out of his pocket he pulled a wire informing him that George Selkirk, catcher, would be sent down to him.

"Well, he reported to me," said the Cambridge manager. "Rochester was sending me a player, too. So when Selkirk came in, I used him. And I'm going to keep on using him."

And with that the two managers began arguing far into the night. They finally wired the Rochester Club to settle the dispute and the ruling came back that George was to play with the club to which he had reported by mistake.

And so the fact that this boy from Rochester accidentally reported to the wrong baseball team altered his entire baseball career, making him an outfielder instead of a catcher.

That Rochester boy has gone far since those days, climbing up until he succeeded to Babe Ruth's job in the Yankee right field and then succeeded in it.

Albany Chirps

Albany—Does writing to an assemblyman help?

Does he want to receive mail from the "folks back home?"

Does he read and answer letters?

Answer: Mostly, yes. Of course much depends on the man; but the affirmation applies to the majority of legislators. And what you write about.

If you were to write for a piece of carpet from the capitol floor, as one constituent did, it is dubious if you would be taken seriously.

Every wise and conscientious legislator welcomes a letter from the friends back home as readily as a sponge drinks water. Letters are an emergency referendum and to a certain extent assist the legislator in characterizing public attitudes.

Not only that but it gives him gun-wadding for battle on an issue. When a legislator supports a measure he is oftimes asked "have you had any correspondence on the subject?" And if his answer is yes and the quantity is sufficient the listener unwaxes his ears.

Further, letters aid him in understanding the aspects of various legislation in relation to different localities and enterprises. Being human his knowledge is limited to certain fields and when legislation goes beyond that he is floundering.

A legislator receives a variety of mail, circulars, pamphlets, selling everything from yachts—such irony—to creeds, ideas and oleomargerine. Therefore, it behooves the constituent to communicate in just plain business-like fashion.

Should you send a postal card or a letter? That depends on the aim of postal pressure. If you just wish to register a vote for or against just send a card. If you wish to discuss the issue, point out your reasons for your stand, send a letter.

And of course there remains two other forms, petitions and resolutions, both efficient and effective.

The Rambler

Rumors were started here last week relative to the marriage of a local couple. Such rumors are vicious and often have embarrassing endings which would put the teller to shame.

April is a tired month. And why not? Who wouldn't be tired after a March of 31 days.

Dressed like a million dollars in her new Easter togs and fur coat, and a hole in the heel of her stocking. Which means her face would have been red and her day ruined had she known it. It all means that no matter how we primp, dress and feel proud, there is always something someone can point at to make us feel humble.

More accidents occur in the homes than anywhere we are told. Some hints to prevent them: Keep electric fixtures dry and use dry hands when using them, fasten rugs to prevent slipping, don't start fires with kerosene, don't permit paper and junk to accumulate in cellars, provide all stairways with lights and hand rails.

Postmaster John O'Keefe has filed a complaint with some Main street merchants relative to people sitting on the desks in the post office. He is afraid the desks will be destroyed and some one will be injured and asked that they be used only for writing. He states offenders are especially prevalent at night.

One motorist in this town found a self-service gas station here recently. He went after some gas and the attendant was enjoying a little nap. So, the motorist helped himself to a dollar's worth of gas and drove away. What a ragging he gave the attendant on his next call.

Our lack of snow reminds me of the excuse a Kansas mother sent to school with her son. "The snow is 18 inches deep and Willie's legs are only 14 inches long".

A professional man in this town told of a way to get people to do what you want by making them think it is what they want. He announced he was going to try it on his wife, but I note that her way and idea prevailed despite his philosophy and psychology so he may abandon the belief.

More hitch-hikers are on the road now so it must be getting near spring and summer. The greatest number going through Addison seem to be going west, so I guess they are leaving their warm winter haunts and taking to "the open road". Using that phrase reminds me of its creator, Walt Whitman. These wayfarers are as his poetry.

She was dressed in a beautiful fur coat and a large orchid colored picture hat. She walked down the street in a dignified manner, rounded a corner and the hat caught a full breeze, left its base and rolled speedily up the street with "She" in full pursuit, and not so dignified. Yes, She caught it.

Well, Folks, the old Rambler begins to feel his years. The Madame and I took in the Welles Hose Ball Monday night and when the night was over we were pretty tired, but very happy. That dance was one of the finest seen in the town hall in many a year and the decoration committee deserves a lot of credit for a splendid job.

The sap season has been rather irregular this year. I have noticed several sap pails hanging on trees within the confines of the village. I can remember as a kid going around stealing sap from buckets and drinking it.

—o—

Some of the CCC boys regretted that the dance was not held a few nights later so they would have their monthly checks and they could have attended as participants instead of as spectators.

—o—

Spring is in the air, tra la! tra la! At least it was when this was written. However, the cold March wind blew on the shady side of the street and along the river bank here to make one seek sunlight.

The Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold of the Baptist Church has received several letters from far away points relative to his playing of the brake drum chimes on the NBC hookup recently. The "buildup" for the program spoke of the impoverished condition of the church here, with the results contributions are being received from San Diego and Missouri to aid in supporting the local church.

Speaking of the Welles Hose dance, some of those attending the affair would like to see another such affair in May. With the decorations all in place and an active committee already to act, it should be a success.

—o—

That's all.

Sessions For Scouters Planned in Steuben Area

At an Executive Board meeting of the Steuben Area Council, Boy Scouts of America held in Corning Wednesday evening of this week Dr. John G. Spencer summarized the results of the several Scouter training courses conducted during the first quarter. Twenty some Scouters completed the First Aid Instruction offered by the Corning and Hornell Chapters of the American Red Cross. One hundred men received credit for instruction in Bath each Monday during March. Seventy-five Patrol Leaders spent a full day in the out-of-doors at different CCC Camps in the area where they received special instruction. Sea Scout leaders met two days with George Clouston at Corning in February.

During the month of April on each of the week-ends; April 10 and 11, April 17 and 18, and April 24 and 25 nearly a hundred Scouters are expected to take out-of-door training at Camp Gorton. Reservations are being made daily for these sessions.

Monday, April 5 the Board of Review and Senior Scout leaders will have separate sessions in Bath.

League Calls EE Certificates

New York, Mar. 29—The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., today called for payment at par on May 1, its EE Certificates of Indebtedness due May 1, 1939. Interest on the series will cease on that date.

J. A. Coulter, treasurer of the Association, said the amount of these certificates outstanding is $1,608,928. The original total of the series, which was issued in July, 1931, was $3,294,781. The amount outstanding has been reduced through the Association's practice of buying Certificates from its members.

In addition to paying off the EE Certificates on May 1, the Dairymen's League will also pay the interest due on this and other issues. Interest to be distributed amounts to $645,000, making a total distribution of $2,253,000.

"Retirement of the EE series two years before they are due", said Mr. Coulter, "is in line with similar action on two earlier issues. Decision to retire this issue now is prompted by the strong capital position of the Association, and the desire to make this money immediately available to farmers at this season when they need cash for spring work."

JIM FARLEY'S MAIL NEEDS MORE SPEED

Came yesterday—March 24—a big bundle which, after eager fingers had unwrapped it, disclosed four speeches by James A. Farley, our most reliable political forecaster, who, you also may remember, is postmaster general and chairman of the Democratic National Committee and of the Democratic State Committee. One was earmarked for release March 8, two March 9 and one March 10. All of which indicates that while Jim may be a wonderful political seer and a resourceful office holder and chairman, he has, in the manner of speaking gone hay-wire in his press releases. Addresses delivered March 8, 9 and 10 are by March 25, old stuff, to put it mildly. For that reason, Jim, The Reporter is sorry it cannot use them.—Horseheads Reporter

Film Stars Adapt Recording Device As Rehearsal Aid

One of Hollywood's newest hobbies has been turned into a practical workaday business device by Simone Simon and James Stewart, stars of "Seventh Heaven", Twentieth Century-Fox romance opening Saturday at the Fox Theatre.

Simone Simon has purchased a recording device for transcribing on a wax disc voices, music and radio broadcasts. Among others in Hollywood who have such an apparatus are Warner Baxter, Victor Kilian and John Qualen.

The fiery French star bought the device so she could continue her study of English and her own voice inflections for her role as Diane in "Seventh Heaven", opposite Stewart, who plays Chico. The apparatus enables her to speak her lines into the machine and then check on her English diction by playing the recorded words on the phonograph immediately afterward.

Stewart rehearsed his lines many times with the aid of the recording instrument at Simone's home. That famous line he speaks in "Seventh Heaven" upon several occasions—"I'm a very remarkable fellow"—was mastered to director Henry King's exacting satisfaction thru the aid of Simone's recording machine.

"It's one of the hardest lines I have ever had to deliver", Stewart says. "There are so many ways in which it can be given, but there's only one way in which it sounds just right. All the others make one appear foolish instead of in character."

Depression and The Birth Rate

As a result of the depression the national birth rate dropped to the point where there was a shortage of nearly 1,000,000 new American babies, according to a southern statistician. Allowing that 730,000 of them would have reached maturity and been gainfully employed and that each worker has a potential life earning capacity of $38,000. the economic loss to the United States can be estimated at 27 billion dollars.

The writer points out that as a result of this decreased birth rate America will have 230,000 less industrial workers than it should have, 160,000 fewer farmers and 280,000 fewer wives, 12,000 railroad men, 8,000 teachers, 116 millionaires and some newspapermen.

Orchid Growing a Science

The state farm census on January 1, 1936 reported nearly 336,000 sheep on 12,747 New York farms. In comparison, nearly 6,000,000 lambs are consumed in the state.

Wombough St. House Fire Scene Monday

An overheated chimney caused a fire in the home of Orville Daily, Wombough street Monday noon. Firemen from both companies responded to the alarm and were forced to rip off several feet of the shingled roof on the east side of the house before they could get at the blaze. The firemen quickly brought the flames under control after getting into the blaze. Damage to the house furnishings was caused by smoke and water.

SUNRISE SERVICE

A sunrise service was held in the Baptist church Easter morning. The devotional and song service was followed by a breakfast. Those present were the Rev. K. E. Arnold, Onolee Little, Esther Docherty, Elaine Howard, June Allen, Ardis Warfle, Francis Jones, Doris and Dorotha Jones, Maude Butler and Ruth Sherwood.

Indications Are CCC Camp Will Be Abandoned

There is a possibility that the CCC Camp on Dininny's Flat, west of this village, may be moved. Nothing definite has been announced from headquarters, but rumors and personnel changes effected during the past few weeks have caused rumors to circulate from various sources that this camp will be taken from Addison and the enrollees will be sent to other places for forest conservation and reforestry work.

The first indications that the camp would be moved from Addison and vicinity came with the fact that the work on the local dam would be abandoned owing to faulty ground and sub-strata conditions. This was followed by announcements the money for Southern New York flood control had not been appropriated.

There were many questions asked as to where $3,000,000 could be spent on the Tuscarora Creek even with 3,000 CCC enrollees working on the project as was at first planned and announced.

Recently word came from Washington that CCC workers were not to be used on the project which was to be done by contract labor. This meant that the CCC men were to be returned to reforestation work, for which the corps was originally created. However the company now in Addison has built sea jetties in Washington, done reforestry work in Idaho and Mississippi and flood control work here.

Removing the men from flood control work would mean the removal of the camp. And the most recent indication of the intent to move is the removal of camp personnel without making provision for replacements.

Experts Give Lighting Tips On Lens Work

Proper lighting is a vital factor in "getting over" mood or emotion in both motion picture and "still" photography, studio artists demonstrated, while screen testing Madeleine Carroll, English film star, before her first American production.

The production, Walter Wanger's "The Case Against Mrs. Ames," will open Monday and Tuesday at the Avon Theatre, with George Brent and Miss Carroll co-starred.

All possible camera and light angles were tried before filming began. Hollywood cameramen have listed the effects of various lightings, all of which were tried in the tests, and suggest that camera enthusiasts might experiment with the following at home:

Low light source—effect of mystery.

High light source—hints serious mood.

They Had to Be Tough

The villains of the stage and screen today aren't the real McCoy. They wouldn't stand a chance if they were to turn their roles to real life. That is, such is the case if one is to believe Frank Campeau, who plays a featured role in "Empty Saddles," the latest Universal picture starring Buck Jones, which is showing Friday and Saturday at the Avon Theatre.

And he speaks with a fair degree of authority, for he was one of the theatre's outstanding bad men a score of years ago. He was the original Trampas in "The Virginian," with Dustin Farnum, which played at New York's Manhattan Theatre in 1905.

For many years after that he was one of the nation's leading "heavies" in pictures and on the stage.

"A man didn't have to be big to be a villian in those days," Campeau says. "All he had to be was tough. And that's more in keeping with what bad men in real life have been.

"Billy, the Kid, Jesse James, the Dalton boys, Wyatt Earp—all of the notorious killers of the West either were small men or not more than average size. They were quicker on the draw than the big fellows."

Scout Leader Prepares Story On the Stars

Our sun is a very attractive object, especially when it begins to thaw away the ice and the snow of winter, and to produce a world of verdure and beauty. To get rid of all the snow and ice of the habitable world by human power and ingenuity would be an impossible task, but a very short period of sunshine can do more than all the inhabitants of the world could do in a lifetime.

Sir John Herschel once said that if a solid cylinder of ice forty-five miles in diameter and 200,000 miles in length were plunged, end first, into the sun, it would melt it in a second of time.

The amount of heat which we receive from the sun every year would melt a layer of ice nearly two hundred feet thick extending over the whole surface of the earth. If we had to heat the sun with coal, it would require a layer of coal twenty feet thick over the whole surface of the earth to feed it for a single hour.

The light of the sun is as bright at 6,000 wax candles at a distance of one foot from the eye. It would require 600,000 full moons to produce a day as bright as one of cloudless sunshine.

Professor Langeley says that the sun is blue, that to the inhabitants of the worlds may shine as a bluer star than Vega.

It is well known that many of the stars are suns much larger and brighter than our sun. Of some of these stars we wish to speak in later articles.
